MyLife & Relationship Based Care

Our care philosophy has always been based on a belief that personal growth and meaningful activity is possible for everyone.

Research and experience tells us that meaningful day-to-day relationships between our team members and residents are at the heart of great care.

MyLife, our award-winning relationship based model of care, integrates care for social, emotional and physical needs, and sees staff truly getting to know residents by finding out what matters most to them, so they can build strong and deep personal relationships.

Relationship based care focuses on partnership with residents, clients and their families, to achieve a highly personalised level of care built on relationships and supporting people to continue doing what matters to them, regardless of frailty or ill health.

When our staff learn more about our residents' unique life experiences, they are able to go above and beyond to find ways to keep our residents connected and participating in the things that matter most to them, like achieving personal goals, reliving old hobbies or trying something new.

Meaningful Moments

Part of building meaningful relationships with our residents is not just getting to know them, but also finding ways to bring joy and laughter into their lives. Our teams look for opportunities to bring meaning into the moments that they share together.

Meaningful moments can come in lots of ways. A shared laugh or joke, a chat over a cuppa, an event or outing that brings back a great memory. Our teams look for creative ways to bring regular meaningful moments into our residents' lives.
